University of California, Los Angeles
Institute for Research on Labor and Employment
Annual Report 2011 - 2012
The Institute for Research on Labor and Employment is a multidisciplinary research center dedicated to the study, teaching, and discussion of labor and employment issues. Through the work of its units - IRLE Academic Unit, Center for Labor Research and Education, Human Resources Roundtable and the Labor Occupational Safety and Health program – the Institute forms wide-ranging research agendas that carry UCLA into the Los Angeles community and beyond.
Irle Units

IRLE Academic Unit (IRLE)

- Research
- Education

IRLE’s Academic Unit conducts and sponsors research, colloquia, and conferences on a wide range of labor-related topics. The unit develops research publications, hosts visiting scholars, and collaborates with other labor research institutions around the country and around the world. The IRLE Academic Unit also coordinates the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor in collaboration with the Center for Labor Research and Education.

Center for Labor Research and Education (UCLA Labor Center)

- Applied Research
- Education
- Advocacy

The UCLA Center for Labor Research and Education plays a unique role as a bridge between the university and the labor community in Southern California. As part of the university, the Labor Center serves as an important source of information about unions and workers to interested scholars and students. Through its extensive connections with unions and workers and its location in downtown Los Angeles, the Labor Center also provides labor with access to UCLA’s resources and programs.

Human Resources Round Table (HARRT)

- Education
- Networking

HARRT is a membership-based organization that brings together leading human resource executives from business, government and non-profit organizations with UCLA faculty to exchange ideas and stimulate thinking about the practice, teaching and research of human resource management.

Labor Occupational Safety and Health Program (LOSH)

- Applied Research
- Education
- Advocacy

LOSH initiatives include health and safety training and education for low-income, minority, immigrant and young workers; public advocacy; and participation in industry-wide research relating to occupational and environmental health policy issues in California. Through this work, LOSH collaborates with workers, unions, community organizations, employers, academics, students, governmental representatives, and health professionals.
The UCLA Institute for Research on Labor and Employment (initially and formerly named the Institute of Industrial Relations) was founded, along with an equivalent institute at UC Berkeley, in 1945 by Governor Earl Warren. The two institutes were the first arms of the University of California to offer specialized research and education programs to the organized labor movement, researchers and students. This time line indicates key moments in the Institute’s 67 year history. For more on IRLE’s long and storied history, visit www.irle.ucla.edu/history

IRLE is led by a Director, who is appointed by the Dean of the Social Science Division of the UCLA College of Letters and Science. The Director is advised by an Associate Director and a Faculty Advisory Committee, with whom he meets to discuss, strategize and implement initiatives of the Institute. Day-to-day management of each of the IRLE units is delegated to unit directors, who report to the IRLE Director.

Institute-wide organizational support and administrative leadership is provided by the IRLE Business Office, which is led by the Chief Administrative Officer and includes the Senior Fund Manager, Operations Coordinator, IT support and project support for the Director.

Cross-Campus Affiliations:
- LOSH is affiliated with the UCLA Center for Occupational and Environmental Health
- HARRT is affiliated with the UCLA Anderson School of Management

Governance in 2011 - 2012

IRLE continues to make progress in strengthening coordination and collaboration across the units. The leadership of IRLE, HARRT, the Labor Center, and LOSH make brief reports at each quarterly Faculty Advisory Committee meeting and have two Institute-wide staff gatherings each year. We continue to have periodic in-depth meetings among the directors of the three larger units (Academic, Labor Center, LOSH) as well as regular meetings and communications among key administrative staff from throughout the Institute. Through these dialogues, we have continued to advance the integration of departmental financial management structure, contract and grant processes, and technical support across the units.

Cross-Unit Task Forces:

• The Minor Task Force contributes, along with the Labor Studies Faculty Steering Committee, to oversight of the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor. This year, the Faculty Steering Committee was reoriented to faculty who are actively engaged in undergraduate instruction.

• Funding Task Force: IRLE staff share information on funding opportunities and coordinate our grant-writing processes.

• Communications Task Force: Staff from LOSH, Labor Center and IRLE meet to develop the Institute’s approach to communications and media.
The funding environment remains a highly challenging one for IRLE. State funding has continued to be provided at a severely reduced level. In response, IRLE and its units continued and expanded efforts to increase collaborative activities that pool resources, to write grants and to solicit supporting contributions. Although we have not been able to completely offset the reductions in state funding, we have once more mounted a strong set of activities and programs during 2011-12. In the face of continuing budget uncertainty, IRLE will be focusing on its core programs of research, teaching, and outreach, keeping other past programs on hold for the time being, and continuing to ramp up external fund-raising efforts. Through these efforts, IRLE has become the largest contract and grant recipient in the UCLA Division of Social Sciences.

Extramural Support

A significant part of IRLE activities is supported by external sources, including grants and gifts. LOSH is almost entirely supported by grants and HARRT applies a membership fee to support its activities. The Labor Center has traditionally relied on support from its constituencies and from the annual Labor Center fund raising banquet to support its programs and research, and in the last two years, has significantly grown its grant-writing. The Academic Unit has likewise expanded its grant and contract activities, securing some modest external sources of support this year, and has three funding proposals and a number of Letter of Inquiries out as of this writing.

In the forthcoming year, IRLE will continue to make grant seeking a priority and will investigate both private foundations and federal sources. Private donations, including those given at the annual Labor Center banquet, are an important part of the Institute’s funding. Additional, though more modest, income is obtained through book sales and through HARRT membership fees. Moving into 2012-2013, further developing a broader overall development strategy will be a priority for IRLE leadership. In addition to the Labor Center’s annual Banquet, the IRLE Academic Unit plans to inaugurate a fundraiser to reach out to new constituencies on behalf of the Labor Studies Minor and the Institute is now in the process of hiring a full-time Development Director.

The chart on the following pages provide an overview of the extramural support provided to IRLE during the 2011-2012 fiscal year.

Participatory Democracy and Social Justice Struggles: From Port Huron to #Occupy
Cosponsored by the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs and the UCLA Social Science Division
[March 6, 2012]

Through this conference, students, academics and practitioners came together to discuss and reflect on student-led democracy movements from the 1960s through the current Occupy movement. The morning sessions of the conference included presentations by graduate students from across the country regarding their research on themes of insurgency and organization building within progressive movements.

The afternoon program was led by UCLA undergraduate students in the Labor and Workplace Minors course “Students and Pro-Democracy Movements.” (p.27) The students presented their reflections and revisions of the Port Huron statement and were joined in the discussion by activists such as Tom Hayden; Gioconda Belli, a former Sandinista who currently is a poet and novelist; Maria Varela, who organized with the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee; Dick and Mickey Flacks, who have been active in teaching and local organizing in the Santa Barbara area for decades; and singer/songwriter Tom Morello.

Action Summit on Worker Health and Safety
Cosponsored by the US Department of Labor
[April 26, 2012]

Secretary of Labor Hilda Solis said in her opening comments, “I also have to thank our friends at UCLA-LOSH for getting the word out about today's summit and for running one of the most important workplace safety and health centers in the nation for the last 34 years. LOSH is a local treasure with a national reach. They’ve trained thousands of workers and saved so many lives. Thank you for all that you do.” LOSH Director Linda Delp moderated a discussion, “Know Your Rights” between Ellen Widess, Chief of Cal/OSHA, Julie Su, California Labor Commissioner, Deborah Berkowitz, Chief of Staff of Federal OSHA, and Ruben Rosalez, U.S. Department of Labor. A groundbreaking outcome of this panel was an improved formal agreement between Cal/OSHA and the Labor Commissioner to cooperate on investigations involving retaliation against workers involved in reporting health and safety violations in the workplace.
Because of the interdisciplinary approach to our research, IRLE maintains strong ties to many UCLA departments and schools. In the 2011-2012 year, IRLE has supported the following events at UCLA:

"More Than a Labor of Love: Organizing Home Care"

Annual Events

Each IRLE unit produces an annual event that highlights an important aspect of labor and employment research.

Benjamin Aaron Labor Law Lecture
November 16, 2011

The 2012 Benjamin Aaron Labor Law Lecture “Rhetoric, Reaction and the Rule of the Law at the NLRB” featured speaker Wilma Liebman, former chair of the National Labor Relations Board. The event is cosponsored by the Los Angeles County Bar Association - Labor and Employment Law Section and the Project on Work and Employment Regulation, UCLA School of Law.

This lecture series is held annually in honor of Benjamin Aaron, a leading expert on U.S. and comparative labor law. Professor Aaron was director of IRLE from 1960 – 1975 and a Professor of Law at UCLA from 1960 until his death in 2007.

UCLA Labor Center Banquet
May 10, 2012

The Labor Center Banquet honors leaders in the labor community while showcasing the important work of the Labor Center projects and celebrating the 2012 graduates of the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor.

The 2012 banquet celebrated the work of United Long-Term Care Workers President Laphonza Butler, Congresswoman Judy Chu, and offered a special tribute to the late Building and Construction Trades Department President Mark Ayers.
Workers’ Memorial Day
April 28, 2012

Organized by the Labor Occupational Safety and Health program, Workers’ Memorial Day honors workers who die on the job; joins with their families and communities to grieve their loss; and raises awareness about worker health and safety. In order to raise additional awareness about Workers’ Memorial Day, activists distributed stickers, blogged stories of workplace injuries and illness, wore black arm-bands, and distributed e-flyers about worker health. Over 250 people attended the event at the UCLA Downtown Labor Center.

This event is held in collaboration with the Southern California Coalition on Occupational Safety and Health (SoCalCOSH).

HARRT Annual Retreat
November 3 - 5, 2011

Each year, the Human Resources Roundtable produces a three day retreat, giving HARRT members an in-depth look at contemporary HR issues. The HARRT Retreat features talks from UCLA faculty, scholars and practicing HR executives.

The 2011 program celebrated HARRT’s 25th anniversary and the theme was “How Neuroscience and Globalization are Transforming HR”. Dr. Robert Bilder, Tennenbaum Professor of Psychiatry & Biobehavioral Sciences and Psychology, David Geffen School of Medicine gave the keynote with a two part session on “Brain Creativity and Flexibility” and “Personal Brain Management”.

Annual Events
Students at IRLE

Whether they are participating in our courses and Labor and Workplace Minor, conducting research or helping with events, IRLE students are an active and important component of IRLE’s work.
The Labor and Workplace Studies (LWS) minor offers UCLA undergraduates the opportunity to learn about the labor movement and the social, political, and economic forces that influence it. Courses in the minor explore issues of labor market, public policy, employment relations, unions, and working-class movements. Curriculum also investigates themes of race, class, and gender in the workplace. This interdisciplinary approach offers students an in-depth understanding of a broad array of issues related to labor and the workplace. The minor helps prepare students for a variety of careers, including labor relations, human resource management, law, domestic and international government work, union organizing, and economic forecasting.

The Labor and Workplace Studies Minor is a joint project of the IRLE Academic Unit and the Labor Center. The Minor curriculum and philosophy is governed by a Faculty Advisory Committee (See Appendix X) whose current chair is IRLE Associate Director, Toby Higbie. Day-to-day operations of the minor, including coordinating courses and faculty, advising students and managing event programming, are administered by Student Affairs Officer II, Liz Espinoza.

93 students were enrolled in the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor in 2011-2012. Student majors are concentrated in Political Science, Sociology and Chicano/studies, but also represent Women’s Studies, History, biological sciences and other disciplines. Scholars and staff affiliated with the UCLA Labor Center make up the majority of Minor faculty and teach a wide variety of courses. The chart on page 26 illustrates the diversity of students that make up the LWS Minor.

In the 2011 UCLA College Senior Survey, 100% of seniors in the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor said they were "satisfied" or "very satisfied" with their overall academic experience—a score well above the College-wide average, and matched by only three other Minors. All of the students in the Minor also gave very high ratings on their overall UCLA experience, the minor’s curriculum, and the faculty’s instruction, creativity and intellectual challenge.

Course Highlights
The Labor and Workplace Studies Minor exposes UCLA students to faculty and special guest lecturers who are not only active researchers, but also active in social justice movements. The following special courses were held in 2011-2012:

Students and Pro-Democracy Movements
Winter Quarter 2012
This undergraduate course was led by Tom Hayden, social and political activist and former California senator. The course marked the 50th anniversary of the publication of the Port Huron Statement, which helped to launch the student movement of the 1960s. Through the course, students analyzed youth activism since the Port Huron Statement in the context of current social and political movements, such as Occupy. The course culminated in a major conference at UCLA in March 2012 featuring Tom Hayden, singer/songwriter Tom Morello, Professor Dick Flacks from UCSB, community organizer Micky Flacks, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee founder Charles McDew, and author/poet Giaconda Belli. (p.17)

Non Violence and Social Movements
Spring Quarter 2012
This undergraduate course was taught by Rev. James Lawson Jr., noted leader of the Civil Rights Movement and associate of Dr. Martin Luther King. The course paid special attention to the use of nonviolence in labor and community organizing in Los Angeles. The course included fieldwork, and students in the class participated in community projects involving the Black Worker Center, CLEAN Carwash Campaign, domestic workers, and undocumented students. In Spring 2013, the UCLA Labor Center will offer a special seminar course on nonviolence led by Rev. Lawson that will culminate in a publication of his nonviolence curriculum.
Labor & Workplace Studies Minor

Internship Opportunities & Career Development

The importance of community work and hands-on experience is reflected in the internship and career development opportunities available to students. Labor Minor students are immersed in the diverse cultures and rich labor movement of Los Angeles. Many Labor Minor graduates continue this work with successful careers in labor and community organizations.

Service Learning

Several of the labor minor courses offer a service learning component, through which students participate in 40 hours (15 hour per week) of fieldwork at a community organization or union over the academic quarter. This fieldwork often culminates in a paper or in-class presentation given by the student. Appendix K lists courses, by instructor, with service learning components and gives details about the service learning assignment and the community organizations we partner with.

Career Development Events

The Labor Minor is committed to preparing students for life beyond UCLA. This year, the Minor offered two career development events:

“After Labor Studies; Graduate School and Career Opportunities” put students in touch with a panel of community leaders and graduate students who have a Labor Minor Studies degree and then went on to pursue a graduate degree.

“Pathways to Careers in Social Justice: An Alternative Summer Internship” introduced UCLA undergraduates to the community work of IRLE and presented information on our summer internship programs.

“The Labor and Workplace Studies minor has maintained and developed a remarkable range of educational experiences for UCLA undergraduate students. The rigorous interdisciplinary curriculum in the minor challenges students intellectually while the field experiences provide opportunities for students to test their classroom learning in the context of everyday life in Los Angeles”

- UCLA Academic Senate, 2012
The Labor Summer Research Internship Program (LSRIP)

The Labor Summer Research Internship Program offers a dual learning experience for students over the summer. Students enroll in a classroom-based summer session course taught by IRLE staff where they learn about the Los Angeles labor movement and skills for research. Through this course, they are placed in a 15 hour per week, unpaid internship at a community organization or labor union where they are able to have hands-on experience in a research role. LSRIP gives students the opportunity to work in a supervised setting in a community agency or labor union and experience direct engagement in social justice issues.

20 students participated in the 2012 Summer Internship Program and were placed with in five different internship sites around Los Angeles. Host organizations included the Black Workers Center, CLEAN Carwash Campaign, Justice for Janitors, Garment Worker Wage Claim Project and the Food Chain Workers Project.

Student Leadership Academy

The Student Leadership Academy is a full-time, paid internship program that focuses on leadership development, training and preparing students for a career in social justice. The program is open to recent graduates from all over the United States, who are selected via an application process for their experience and commitment to social justice. During the 8-week program, students work full-time on active labor union campaigns around Southern California. The Student Leadership Academy includes an intensive, two-day training and orientation conducted by IRLE staff and community leaders. Students learn and practice basic organizing techniques, discuss the challenges of working in the labor movement and build a support network of young activists.

The 2011 Student Leadership Academy placed 34 students in 6 unions, including AFSCME-UNAC, Warehouse Workers United, SEIU-ULTCW, UFCW and the California Construction Academy.

The 2012 Student Leadership Academy placed 38 students in 5 unions, including California Federation of Teachers, Good Jobs LA, SEIU-ULTCW, Directors Guild of America and UFCW Local 770.
Student Participation at IRLE

In addition to participating through the Labor and Workplace Studies Minor, IRLE integrates students into all aspects of its projects: from internship and research opportunities to event programming. Highlights of 2011-2012 IRLE student work include:

- Undergraduate students in the Labor and Workplace Minor course “Students in Pro-Democracy Movements” organizing presentations for the March 2012 conference “From Port Huron to #Occupy” (p.17)
- UCLA doctoral students co-editing a special issue of Journal of Workplace Rights, “Labor in the Global South: A Search for Solutions” with IRLE director Chris Tilly
- Undergraduate students contributing to archival research and processing associated with the Justice for Janitors archive, now housed in UCLA Library Special Collections (p.19)
- UCLA undergraduate students authoring and editing the Labor Center Book Undocumented and Unafraid: Tam Tran, Cinthya Felix and the Immigrant Youth Movement (p.72)
- Four students who participated in the OHIP Summer 2010 internship program (p.33) presenting their projects at the Annual Meeting of the American Public Health Association held in Washington, DC, in November, 2011.
- Undergraduate and graduate students helping the Institute for Transnational Social Change (p.46) coordinate the binational conferences and video conferencing.
- Labor Center law interns working to assist staff of the Department of Industrial Relations, Office of Labor Standards Enforcement with the backlog of AB633 wage theft claims for garment workers. (p.43)

IRLE Graduate Student Researchers

Kyle Arnone (Sociology) assisted with grant writing for the research project “Analyze to Win: The Crucial Role of Strategic Research in Building Worker Power in the Neoliberal Economy” (p.38)

Patrick Adler (Urban Planning) provided research assistance for Chris Tilly related to the “Global Retail Landscapes” project.(p.38)

Bradley Cleveland (Urban Planning) was the main organizer of the April 2012 workshop for the research project “Experiences Organizing Informal Workers”. (p.41)

Diana Denham (Urban Planning/Latin American Studies) provided research assistance for Chris Tilly related to the “Global Retail Landscapes” project. (p.38) She co-authored a paper with Professor Tilly that was presented at the Latin American Studies Association meeting in June 2012.

Betsy Estudillo (School of Social Welfare) conducted background research for LOSH’s “OSHA Susan Harwood Capacity Building” project (p.56); assisted with a Spanish language evaluation survey of OSHA training participants, and organized and updated reference and educational materials in the LOSH electronic library.

Alexandra Holmstrom-Smith and Julia Tomassetti (Sociology) assisted with grant-writing for the research project “Experiences Organizing Informal Workers”. (p.41)

Juliet Huang (UCLA Anderson) assisted with research on the project to analyze the impact of the California Film and TV tax credit. She received co-authorship credit on the report. (p.68)

Ashley Kissinger (School of Public Health): provided support for “HAZWOPER evaluation study” (p.53) and the “Office Ergonomics” study (p.59); conducted background research and helped develop curricula and materials for LOSH courses on green chemistry and environmental justice; and conducted research on low-wage workers and the burden of occupational injuries/illnesses.

Liz Kofman (Urban Planning) assisted the Los Angeles Black Worker Center (p.51) with research, programming and other activities.

Giulia Pasciuto and Lila Burgos (both Master of Urban and Regional Planning students), coordinated the logistics for the From “Port Huron to #Occupy” (p.19) conference.
Students At IRLE

In addition to the Labor Summer Research Internship Program and the Student Leadership Academy internship programs that are offered through the Labor Studies Minor, IRLE units host additional internship opportunities that expose students to labor issues.

Dream Summer

Dream Summer is a partnership between the Dream Resource Center at the UCLA Downtown Labor Center and United We Dream, a non-profit, youth-led organization that advocates for equal access to higher education for all students.

Dream Summer is a ten-week, national internship program for DREAM Act student activists and leaders. Students who are accepted into the program receive a scholarship to advance their educational goals and are placed with social justice, labor and community organizations in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Phoenix, New York, Washington DC and Miami.

For more information about Dream Summer and the Dream Resource Center, please see pages 47-48.

Young Workers Leadership Academy

Ten young worker leaders from southern California high schools and youth organizations participated in the Academy, which is organized statewide with the Labor Occupational Health Program (LOHP) at UC Berkeley.

The youth put together action plans to raise awareness in their schools and communities in order to prevent injury and illness of other young workers. The young worker leaders continue to receive support from LOSH on effective actions to promote health and safety awareness, and have continued to be involved by participating and volunteering in community events such as the April 28th Workers Memorial Day 2012.
Students At IRLE

Occupational Health Internship Program (OHIP)

For the past seven years, LOSH has collaborated with the Association of Occupational and Environmental Clinics to recruit students into the field of occupational health through a national initiative, the Occupational Health Internship Program (OHIP). The purpose of OHIP is to provide an experiential learning process: students learn about the field of occupational health and safety from the perspective of workers. OHIP assigns students with unions, worker centers, and community-based organizations. This provides an opportunity to learn directly from those with most at stake; the workers. The skills and interests of the interns are linked with the needs of workers' health and safety concerns.

The internship includes a three-day orientation where interns receive a general overview of occupational safety and health through a number of interactive educational sessions and activities including worksite tours to an industrial laundry facility, an apparel manufacturing plant, and a construction site; listening to a panel of injured workers; and discussing research strategies around OSH and related topics.

Currently, LOSH is sponsoring six undergraduate and graduate student interns as part of the 2012 OHIP program. The students are working in pairs on three research projects in collaboration with labor and community organizations:

- Two students are working with SEIU United Service Workers West to investigate health and safety hazards of ground crew workers at Los Angeles International Airport.
- Two students are working with the California Healthy Nail Salon Collaborative to conduct outreach and training with nail salon workers and owners about chemical hazards and greener salon practices.
- Two students are working with the Southside Coalition of Community Health Clinics to assess the capacity of community clinics to identify and address work-related injuries and illnesses among their patient populations.
Community Scholars

The Community Scholars Program is a joint initiative of UCLA’s Department of Urban Planning and the UCLA Labor Center that recognizes the important role that community and labor leaders play in shaping community development policy in Los Angeles. Through the Community Scholars Program, community and labor leaders, regardless of their educational background, participate in a special applied research project seminar along with graduate students for two academic quarters. The project always culminates in a unique product designed by the scholars and students. Students who complete the program receive a certificate of completion from the UCLA Urban Planning Department.

A new theme is selected each academic year and the 2011-2012 Community Scholars theme was “Right to Health in South LA: the Battle of the Story”. The project centered on creating popular education and communication products that discuss health policy issues in South Los Angeles. Over the two quarters, participants developed their communications concept, produced and tested their ideas and shared them with their peers in a culminating “Story Gallery”.

Research at IRLE

IRLE research projects are multidisciplinary and multifaceted; many projects use elements of community based research and civic engagement, as well as traditional research methods, to develop the field of labor and employment. These pages describe the work of all units of IRLE. Look for these symbols to tell you more about how our projects relate to the UCLA mission:

Research: These projects involve academic or community based research

Civic Engagement: These projects involve community engagement, either through workshops and trainings or policy analysis.

Global: Our actions are more than local - these projects have an international component.
Research: Industry Initiatives

Industry trends not only affect the economy at large, but also the daily conditions of workers. IRLE researchers analyzing industry changes contribute to an evolving discussion and understanding of labor and employment issues around the globe.

Analyze to Win: The Crucial Role of Strategic Research in Building Worker Power in the Neoliberal Economy

Chris Tilly

Research Partner: Joshua Bloom, UCLA Department of Sociology

This research investigates why and how US unions use in-depth, strategic research to build power, and why and how it works. The project is coordinated by UCLA Sociology doctoral student Joshua Bloom and IRLE Director Chris Tilly and includes a working group of several other UCLA Sociology doctoral students. A co-authored book on this research is planned.

Global Retail Landscapes

Chris Tilly

Research Partners: Francoise Carré, University of Massachusetts, Boston

This research project, led by IRLE director Chris Tilly, looks at variations and change in retail job quality in the US in the context of global comparisons with Mexico and several European countries. The project, supported by funds from the Ford, Rockefeller, and Russell Sage Foundations, the Upjohn Institute for Employment Research, a UCLA Faculty Senate grant, and the Fulbright Scholar Program includes fieldwork in both Mexico and the United States. Carré and Tilly are working on a monograph, tentatively titled Working in Retail Around the World, which is projected to be completed in 2013. In the 2011-2012 year, this research project yielded five publications and the research was presented at eight academic conferences.
Impact of the California Film and Television Tax Credit

Chris Tilly, Lauren Appelbaum
Research Partners: Headway Project

IRLE researchers examined the impact of the California Film and Television Tax Credit on the location of film and TV production in the state, and the consequent economic impact on the California economy. Coordinated by IRLE Research Director Lauren Appelbaum and Chris Tilly, the project was completed with support from the Headway Project, a new nonpartisan research institute. The findings were published in the IRLE Industry Report, “Economic and Production Impacts of the 2009 California Film and Television Tax Credit”. (p 68)

Kaiser Permanente-Labor Management Partnership Project

Janna Shadduck-Hernández
Community Partners: Kaiser Permanente

Political and Economic Literacy is a participatory/popular education curriculum under development by UCLA Labor Center staff and community partners for Kaiser Permanente’s national education program. This curriculum will be utilized by Kaiser Permanente (KP) educators to train front-line staff on the impact of the national health care reform debates. A subsequent funded phase to this project is presently being discussed with the Labor Management Partnership and would facilitate a training program to pilot this curriculum with KP members throughout the country. Initial piloting for the project began in March 2012 at the KP national delegates meeting in Los Angeles and the curriculum is scheduled to be complete by fall 2012.
Research: Industry Initiatives

California Construction Academy
Daniel Villao, Uyen Le, Hugo Sarmiento, Lanita Morris and Stefanie Ritoper

The California Construction Academy (CCA), a project of the UCLA Labor Center, is dedicated to building a better construction industry and ensuring that construction jobs are good jobs. CCA conducts research, educational programs and convenes diverse partners in the construction industry to develop innovative and collaborative solutions to move the construction industry forward. This year, the CCA developed three major initiatives:

Beyond Green Jobs: Building Lasting Opportunities in Energy Efficiency

The CCA wrote and published the book Beyond Green Jobs: Building Lasting Opportunities in Energy Efficiency. Beyond Green Jobs highlights innovative programs across the country and shows why going "deep green" can provide the greatest benefits to the economy, the environment, and the community.

Responsive Construction Industry Research

CCA regularly conducts research on pressing construction industry issues. In the past year, the CCA has published two research reports on Project Labor Agreements: Project Labor Agreements: Pathways to Business Ownership and Workforce Development in Los Angeles; and On Track for Quality Careers: Project Labor Agreements and the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority. In addition, CCA also conducted research on energy efficiency and construction contractors and their ability to access energy efficiency projects.

Official Construction Intermediary for City of Los Angeles

The California Construction Academy is the official construction intermediary for the City of Los Angeles. It brings together diverse construction industry partners to discuss pressing construction issues. CCA staff facilitate meetings and provide one-on-one technical assistance to workforce development practitioners, community organizations, building trades unions, and policymakers. CCA provides technical assistance to several groups, including the Los Angeles Green Retrofit Program and Emerald Cities.
Wage policy isn’t just about setting a minimum wage standard – it’s about improving the quality of jobs with fair and equal pay and with protections for workers against wage violations. IRLE’s research on low-wage work and wage theft informs these policies from the global to the local.

Global Strategies for Improving Low-Wage Jobs

Chris Tilly

Research Partners: UC Berkeley, University of Campinas, Brazil; Peking University; Johns Hopkins University; Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, Iztapalapa; University of Witwatersrand, South Africa; University of British Columbia; CUNY, Rutgers University and Hong Kong University of Science and Technology

This research project analyzes problems of low-wage work in the US and around the world, with focus on strategies, particularly organizing strategies, for improving those jobs. Continuing on work from previous years, IRLE launched a new phase of this project called “Experiences Organizing Informal Workers” with UC Berkeley Sociologist Peter Evans. “Experiences Organizing Informal Workers” has created a network of researchers from the US, Brazil, Canada, China, India, Mexico, South Africa, and South Korea. The project will use comparisons of informal worker organizing across the eight countries to search for best practices and analyze what succeeds and fails in which contexts, and why. During this year, there was an initial convening of the network, development of a conceptual framework and research design, and an initial round of grant-writing.

This fiscal year, the project also yielded a special double issue of the Journal of Workplace Rights called “Labor in the Global South: A Search for Solutions”. The research also contributed to Tilly’s co-edited volume Are Bad Jobs Inevitable?, published in 2011 (p.73).
Wage Theft

IRLE’s hallmark 2010 report on wage theft, Wage Theft and Workplace Violations in Los Angeles: The Failure of Employment and Labor Law for Low-wage Workers, continues to drive research and community action at the UCLA Labor Center and IRLE. The following events and projects related to wage theft were initiated this year:

Coalition Against Wage Theft Campaign

Victor Narro, Tia Koonse

Community Partners: Teamsters, UNITE HERE Local 11, the National Day Laborer Organizing Network (NDLON) and its member organizations in Los Angeles, the Coalition for Human Immigrant Rights Los Angeles (CHIRLA), Instituto de Educacion Popular del Sur de California (IDEPSCA), and Central American Resource Center (CARECEN), as well as the Koreatown Immigrant Workers Alliance (KIWA), the CLEAN CarWash Campaign, the Maintenance Cooperative Trust Fund (MCFT), the Black Workers Center, and the Garment Worker Center

On April 17, 2012, the Labor Center united students, union leaders and worker center leaders from across Los Angeles to launch a coordinated effort to combat wage theft. The Coalition Against Wage Theft held press actions on the steps of City Attorney Carmen Trutanich’s office to demand meaningful enforcement of wage and hour laws in Los Angeles and held a Korean-language press conference targeting Koreatown business owners to promote better understanding and investment in compliance with wage and hour laws. The Coalition has also developed and distributed popular education materials, including pamphlets, videos, and compiled testimonies to lawmakers and community multiple popular education materials highlighting personal narratives and key facts about wage theft in Los Angeles and the process of wage claims from filing to collections.

Closing the Collections Gap

Victor Narro, Tia Koonse

To improve collections outcomes for workers who win their wage claims with the Labor Commissioner, the Labor Center partnered with the Wage Justice Center, the CLEAN CarWash Campaign, IDEPSCA, NDLON and MCTF to promote better understanding and a campaign to expand the use and application of wage liens filed on employer property to help ensure successful collection after a worker wins a wage claim with the Labor Commissioner or in civil court.

Wage Theft : Education and Outreach

Victor Narro, Tia Koonse

Drawing on personal testimony from low-wage workers and findings and policy recommendations contained in Wage Theft and Workplace Violations in Los Angeles: The Failure of Employment and Labor Law for Low-Wage Worker (Ruth Milkman et al., 2009), Labor Center Program Director Victor Narro and Researcher Tia Koonse lead multiple delegations to educate Los Angeles city officials, business communities, unions, students and community organizations about the scope and magnitude of wage theft and the role that local municipalities can play to promote responsible business practices.
Research: Wage Policy

This year the UCLA Labor Center entered into a contract with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) of the Department of Industrial Relations to help DLSE improve its process of filing AB 633 (wage violations) claims for garment workers. Using data sets from Wage Theft and Workplace Violations in Los Angeles, IRLE researchers identified specific employers that are violating workers’ wage protections and used these data sets in a mapping system that could be used by DLSE field investigators to identify “hot spot” locations for labor violations of low wage industries. In addition, Labor Center researchers created a data report of the types of labor violations in garment manufacturing and the practices of manufacturers/retailers well as analyzed the issues of the AB633 claim process itself.

In the second phase of the project, UCLA Labor Center staff have been training and supervising teams of UCLA interns to assist the DLSE staff at their central LA office to help reduce the backlog of AB 633 claims and provide support to improve the quality of services for garment workers. The Labor Center has also funded a film production company to produce two videos on the AB 633 Claims Process and the Wage Claim Adjudication Claims Process as orientation for workers while they wait for their claims to be processed at the DLSE offices.
Through immigration and migration, workforce, industries, policies, and practices flow across borders. IRLE research examines how immigration affects communities, workers and the global economy.

Global Port Cities: Marseilles and Los Angeles

Janna Shadduck-Hernández
Research Partner: Université de Provence Aix-Marseille

Janna Shadduck-Hernandez initiated a comparative research project with academics and educators at the universities of Aix-en-Provence and Marseilles on low-wage immigrant workers and their families. Initial project will compare Los Angeles and Marseilles as global port cities with significant low-wage immigrant workers.

Civic Engagement Among Indigenous Mexican Migrant Youth in the Central San Joaquin Valley: Strategies, Repertoires, and Lessons

Gaspar Rivera Salgado
Research Partner: Jonathan Fox, UC Santa Cruz

This participatory action research project will document and analyze the civic engagement decisions and practices of Mexican indigenous migrant young adults in the central region of the San Joaquin Valley (Madera and Fresno Counties). The project will bring together focus groups of civically engaged youth to discuss access to education and other community needs assessment. A regional meeting and bilingual report is planned. This research is funded by the Center for Collaborative Research for an Equitable California at UC Santa Cruz.

Pacific Rim Labor

Kent Wong, Victor Narro
Community Partners: US Department of State, Harvard University, CUNY

The UCLA Labor Center is a resource for scholars from China and Vietnam to learn about labor practices in the United States. In November 2011, the Labor Center hosted a major State Department-funded tour of ten Vietnamese labor leaders and scholars. The scholars visited the UCLA campus, the Downtown Labor Center, worker center sites and unions across Los Angeles. In Spring 2012, a three university consortium (Harvard, CUNY, and UCLA Labor Center) was awarded a $1.4 million two year grant from the state department to develop labor studies projects in Beijing and Shanghai along with labor scholars of China. As part of this initiative, Labor Center Director Kent Wong will be bringing United Auto Workers President Bob King to China in July 2012 and will be developing this project with labor scholars and labor leaders in the 2012-2013, and 2013-2014 academic years.
Globalization and Labor Standards

The Globalization and Labor Standards (GALS) Bibliographic Library is a project collaboration between the Institute for Research on Labor and Employment and the UCLA School of Law. The project is directed by UCLA Law Professor Katherine Stone, who also sits on the IRLE Faculty Advisory Committee.

The library contains abstracts of recent law journal articles exploring international labor standards and rights in the global economy. Taken from English language law journals from around the world, GALS provides an annotated bibliography categorized by subject heading. Current subject headings include: Codes of Conduct, Child Labor, NAFTA, WTO, Alien Tort Claims Act, ILO, European Union, Forced Labor, Trade Conditionality, Women’s Rights, etc.

The database allows researchers to search or browse the archive of current and previously posted abstracts by subject, author, journal, date, or keyword. The database can be accessed through www.laborstandards.org.
Research: Immigration and Global Labor

Institute for Transnational Social Change (ITSC)
Gaspar Rivera Salgado, Veronica Wilson
Research Partners: Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, Iztapalapa

The Institute for Transnational Social Change (ITSC) is a research hub for crossborder collaboration among labor leaders, academics, and activists in Mexico and the United States. ITSC provides vital research and educational tools in accessible bilingual formats, particularly to help workers mired by the effects of one-sided global economic policy and vulnerable to abuses of multinational corporations. Through its work, ITSC connects Mexican and US researchers with independent unions in Mexico to study labor reform and best practices in labor conflicts.

2011-2012 ITSC Projects:

Binational Workshop:
“Transnational Perspectives on the Future of Labor: Building on the Legacy of Cross-Border Labor Solidarity”, brought together more than 50 labor experts, academics, activists, students and members of the general public from the US and Mexico for two days in July 2011. The bilingual event featured presentations from organizers at worker centers in Mexico and the US, who spoke of their innovative solutions to advocate for marginalized and excluded workers. The event concluded with a public forum on international solidarity and immigrant workers that included speakers Maria Elena Durazo (LA County Federation of Labor), Mike Garcia (United Service Workers West-SEIU), and Peter Olney (International Longshore and Warehouse Union).

Videoconferences (UCLA-UAM-I)
ITSC hosted two videoconferences in 2012 with panelists from the US and Mexico. Researchers presented and discussed current labor issues in their country, including the recent anti-labor political movements in Mexico and the state of Wisconsin.

Publications
Following the success of ITSC’s 2010 report “Building a Culture of Cross-Border Solidarity”, ITSC commissioned two reports that will be forthcoming next year. One report offers key insights for transnational organizing against large multinational corporations and the second report discusses how Mexican Labor Boards mediate labor relations in Mexico.
In the past few years, the UCLA Labor Center has emerged as a national center for research, education, and policy on undocumented immigrant student issues. In addressing the needs of undocumented youth, the UCLA Labor Center contributes to building a stronger nation, a stronger economy and a stronger UCLA.

Through the Dream Resource Center, the following projects have been initiated this year:

Undocumented and Unafraid

Research Partners: UCLA Department of Chicana/o Studies, UCLA Labor and Workplace Studies minor

This book, produced by undergraduate students from the Labor and Workplace Studies and Chicana/o Studies Departments at UCLA over the last academic year, “is designed as an educational tool to inspire others to raise their voices in the struggle for humane immigrant rights,” and follows their first publication, Underground Undergrads: UCLA Undocumented Immigrant Students Speak Out. (p.72)

Mental Health and Undocumented Students

Research Partners: UCLA Department of Social Welfare

In Winter and Spring quarter 2012, the UCLA Labor Center partnered with the UCLA Social Welfare Department in offering the first course on the mental health needs of undocumented students. Twenty MSW students conducted research on the mental health needs of undocumented immigrant youth and identified significant concerns regarding depression, anxiety, and stress. The Dream Peer Counseling Project, Collective of Immigrant Resilience through Community Led Empowerment (CIRCLE) emerged out of this collaboration, and provides a space for immigrant youth to address and cope with the unique experience of living as undocumented.
The UCLA Labor Center in partnership with the United We Dream Network, developed Dream Summer 2011, the first national internship for DREAM Act student leaders across the country. Students attending Dream Summer participated in leadership and organizing trainings, taught by some of the most prominent leaders in the immigrant rights movement, including Tom Saenz, President and General Council of MALDEF and Reverend James Lawson.

Following the training, students were placed for ten weeks with social justice and labor organizations where they gained an invaluable experience in leadership and organizing in cities across the country including Los Angeles, Sacramento, Phoenix, Miami, New York and Washington D.C.

Dream Summer will be held again in 2012 and will include a special component “Queer Dream Summer” for those student leaders who identify with the Queer/LGBTQ community.
Research: Workers

Workers

Workers are the foundation of labor markets. IRLE research on who workers are, where they live and how they work, contributes to evolving discussions on the global economy.

Asian Pacific American Worker Initiatives

Jan Tokumaru, Lucia Lin and Kent Wong
Community Partners: Koreatown Immigrant Workers Alliance, Asian Pacific American Labor Alliance LA chapter, Asian Pacific American Legal Center, and Pilipino Workers Center

Through research, education and community action, the Labor Center has advanced the visibility and interests of Asian American workers in the labor movement in Los Angeles. In July 2011, the Labor Center partnered with the Asian Pacific American Labor Alliance and the Center for Economic Policy and Research to publish a report on the state of Asian American workers, “Diversity and Change: Asian American and Pacific Island Workers” that addresses the contributions of API workers to the workforce.

Community outreach and connections to partner institutions allow the Labor Center to educate workers, employers and researchers on the diversity and challenges within the API workforce.

Domestic Workers

Natalia Garcia, Victor Narro
Community Partners: California Domestic Workers Coalition

The UCLA Labor Center has collaborated with the California Domestic Workers Coalition on its campaign to improve working conditions for domestic workers in California. Labor Center staff provided analysis and research on legal issues and assisted in developing leadership workshops and educational materials for the domestic workers from CHIRLA, IDEPSCA and other groups from Southern California working on this campaign.

In addition, the Labor Center worked with the coalition to create and implement strategies to ensure effective outreach, public education, and implementation monitoring and documentation of the policy changes that would provide labor protections for domestic workers.
Worker Centers and Workforce Development Initiatives
Victor Narro, Janna Shadduck-Hernández, Pamela Izvanariu
Research Partners: Hector Cordero Guzman

Through the grant with the Ford Foundation, IRLE researchers have developed groundbreaking research on major worker center networks. This year, the staff completed the first ever comprehensive literature review of the major worker center networks and developed the foundation for a clearinghouse of reports, leadership curricula, and studies produced by the worker center networks and their member organizations.

The Labor Center also completed and received a second Ford Foundation grant to focus on workforce development pilot projects and campaign and leadership development for members of key worker center networks. This grant will also support the development of communication and education tools to dissemination information about this work.

A forthcoming book, with Hector Cordero Guzman, Professor of Sociology at Baruch College-NYU, will document the historical developments of the major worker center networks and their contributions to improving working conditions for low-wage workers and creating innovative workforce development opportunities for them.

Parent Worker University
Janna Shadduck-Hernández
Community Partners: Building Skills Partnership, Community Coalition, Inner City Struggle, SEIU Local 99, SEIU- USWW, SEIU 721, SEIU-ULTCW, UCLA IDEAS, UNITE HERE Local 11 and UTLA

Many union workers in low-wage industries live in neighborhoods with high concentrations of poverty and low-performing schools. Parent Worker University brings union parents to fight for better schools and educational equity.

The Labor Center partners with a coalition of Los Angeles education and labor organizations to lead workshops that inform workers about how the public school system functions and how resource inequalities affect their children’s education, and to educate policymakers about educational inequities.
Los Angeles Black Worker Center
Lola Smallwood Curevas, Lanita Morris, Pearl Loehnig, La Tonya Harris and Richard Stevenson

Founded in 2011, the Los Angeles Black Worker Center works to address the job crisis in the African American community. The BWC provides leadership development trainings focused on improving access for young black workers interested in jobs in the construction industry and works to advocate for better public policies and corporate practices for workers in Los Angeles.

Project Labor Agreement

On January 26th, the Los Angeles Metropolitan Transportation Authority approved a five-year agreement that requires a targeted hiring program for transit projects, ultimately creating an estimated 23,000 wage-paying union construction jobs. The agreement is the nation’s first master project labor agreement approved by a regional transportation agency, and includes a targeted hiring requirement of 40% with 10% disadvantaged workers. The LA Black Worker Center built partnerships between workers, labor, community organizations and policymakers to ensure the agreement has stronger language in support of diversity; stronger disadvantaged criteria and federal civil rights and equal opportunity language which includes affirmative action enforcement and monitoring.

Community Monitoring Report Card

In response to the passage of the new Project Labor Agreement as well as the upcoming opening of the Los Angeles football stadium and the Crenshaw to LAX Metro Line projects, the LA Black Worker Center teamed up with graduate student researchers at UCLA and USC to produce the first community-implemented monitoring and accountability tool that grades construction contractors’ commitment to diversity on the job. The report card has five indicators of contractor commitment to diversity which will be averaged out to determine a contractor’s final grade. Those indicators include: (1) compliance with anti-discrimination regimes under the Civil Rights Act; (2) community relations; (3) access for all workers; (4) transparency in hiring practices; and (5) diversity on the job site. Five interns are testing the pilot in summer 2012 through the Labor Summer Research Program (p.29), grading the 12 contractors on the “short list” for consideration for the Crenshaw Metro Line.
Research: Workers

Black Worker Town Hall
On May 1st, more than 200 Black construction workers and community residents joined civic and labor leaders on Saturday at a town hall meeting to discuss a new era in employment for African-Americans two decades after the 1992 civil unrest. Organized by the Los Angeles Black Worker Center, the town hall meeting featured a series of panel discussions about employment barriers Black workers commonly face and ways they can leverage future job opportunities through public sector construction contracts. The event, which drew such elected officials as Congresswoman Karen Bass and Los Angeles County Supervisor Mark Ridley-Thomas, took place at the Watts Labor Community Action Committee.

Black Leaders in Green (BLING) Leadership Institute
On June 29th, 2012, the Los Angeles Black Worker Center launched its mentorship program, BLING, which seeks to develop and increase access and retention among young, black construction workers in high-road construction and utility careers through cutting-edge popular education, on-going mentorship, and advocacy. Young BLING workers gain an understanding of a) how the economy works through a black lens; b) black workers’ experience in the building and construction trades in Los Angeles; and c) opportunities for building new black leadership in the building and construction trades, particularly in the green economy.
Research and community projects on worker health & safety are carried out by the Labor and Occupational Health (LOSH) program. LOSH conducts research on a variety occupational health issues and also provides a number of important health and safety trainings that connect workers, students and employers with improved job quality.

Hazardous Waste Worker Training Project

LOSH serves as the lead organization in a five-university Western Region Universities Consortium (WRUC), which educates over 3,000 workers and professionals each year to develop or strengthen occupational health programs for workers who handle hazardous materials, respond to environmental emergencies, and clean up hazardous waste. LOSH is responsible for overall fund management, curriculum development and quality training programs, data collection and analysis, and evaluation. Other Consortium members are UC Berkeley, the University Extension program at UC Davis, Arizona State University, and the University of Washington. The Consortium has provided innovative hazardous waste/hazmat training for the past 23 years in English and Spanish in EPA Regions IX and X.

Under the Hazardous Waste Worker Training grant, LOSH provides courses in hazardous waste site worker, refresher, site-worker train the trainer, general construction safety, hazard communication, and emergency response. Courses offered include both open enrollment courses and those tailored to specific employers or agencies (e.g., LA Unified School District employees, county mental health workers). LOSH also collaborates with unions and community organizations such as the WorkSource centers to reach underserved workers, including low-wage, Spanish-speaking and/or minority workers.

On behalf of the consortium, LOSH is collaborating with the University of Massachusetts/Lowell, the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, and the University of Cincinnati to implement a three-year mixed-methods evaluation of our hazmat worker training programs. LOSH Director of Research and Evaluation Kevin Riley is leading the planning and implementation of an online survey of managers who send their employees to our HAZWOPER courses. LOSH plans to present preliminary findings from this research at the NIEHS Evaluation Workshop in October 2012 and at the annual meetings of the American Public Health Association in November 2012.
HazMat Disaster Preparedness Training Project

The primary goal of LOSH's HazMat Disaster Preparedness Training Program is to ensure that dock and other transport workers who handle goods transported through West Coast ports receive health and safety awareness training to 1) enable them to play an active role in identifying risks to their own and the community's safety and security, and 2) ensure they are able to respond appropriately in the event of hazmat emergencies or other disasters. LOSH also provides training to emergency responders in other high-risk industries in Southern California. The funding for this project is provided through the Western Region Universities Consortium (WRUC); other WRUC members participating on this grant include the Extension Program at the University of California at Davis and the University of Washington.

Under this HazMat Disaster Preparedness Training project, LOSH has built important relationships with the International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) and the Pacific Maritime Association (PMA) to offer courses in emergency response awareness, emergency response technician, and hazard communication. In addition, courses have been provided to workers at Edwards Air Force Base, California Conservation Corps, and Northridge Hospital Medical Center. All LOSH emergency response training is certified through the California Specialized Training Institute (CSTI).

In May 2012, Katy McNamara met with safety representatives from four local sections of the ILWU to discuss diesel exhaust exposures at the Port of LA/Long Beach. She summarized the exposure assessment that was conducted by the NIOSH Health Hazard Evaluation (HHE 2003-0246-3013) in 2005, and updated these findings with data from community air monitoring stations on Port property. The training included a summary of health effects of from diesel exposure and a breakdown of diesel exhaust components.
Research: Occupational Health & Safety

Minority Worker Training Project

Community Partners: Los Angeles State Energy Sector Partnership

In August 2010, LOSH received new funds through NIEHS’s Minority Worker Training Program (MWTP) to train individuals for jobs in the environmental field and construction industry, with a focus on recruiting from underserved urban communities disproportionately affected by environmental exposures. The program builds on new and existing LOSH relationships with labor, community, environmental justice and workforce development organizations to reach targeted underserved populations in Los Angeles. Our efforts are designed to prepare trainees for environmental and construction careers in civil service and in the private sector.

LOSH has partnered with the Los Angeles State Energy Sector Partnership, an ongoing collaboration between the City of Los Angeles, the United Auto Workers/Southeast LA Work Source Center, and Los Angeles Harbor College. The partnership works to connect low-income people to careers in the growing green economy. The MWTP expands the partnership’s ability to offer health and safety and basic skills training to participants, providing pathways into environmental and construction careers. An important focus of the Minority Worker Training Program is on job placement for program participants. In the current grant year, the job placement rate among LOSH’s MWTP trainees is 72.2 percent. Trainees have secured jobs in construction, environmental work, carpentry, and as laborers, as well as with energy and solar firms and as clerks at local warehouses. Trainees who have not yet been placed in jobs receive continued support from the UAW/SELA WorkSource Center.

During the current NIEHS grant year, LOSH is completing an eLearning tool on environmental and health hazards and benefits associated with green building retrofits to be used as a complement to our training courses.
Research: Occupational Health & Safety

Capacity-Building with the Los Angeles and Orange County Federations of Labor

Community Partners: Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, Orange County Federation of Labor

In 2010, LOSH was awarded a grant to build capacity to address worker injury and illness in Southern California in collaboration with the LA County Federation of Labor, the Orange County Labor Federation, their affiliate unions, and community groups. For the first time, the LA County Federation of Labor (LA Fed) has a Health and Safety Coordinator on staff and, working together, LOSH and the LA Fed have trained hundreds of Spanish and English speaking workers in both LA and Orange counties. During this time the LA and OC Federations have each Cosponsored a health and safety conference for their respective delegates. Equally important, several events have provided an opportunity for labor leaders and workers to exchange ideas and issues directly with the new Chief of Cal/OSHA, Ellen Widess, and the new CA Labor Commissioner, Julie Su. Low wage immigrant workers from the carwash, hotel, recycling, warehouse, and others have been able to voice their concerns and propose solutions regarding health & safety and poor working conditions directly to state and federal authorities during project-sponsored events.

The aim of this grant is to ‘institutionalize’ health and safety training for immigrant, low wage workers with a strategic focus on the hotel, car wash and waste/recycling industries. FY 2011-12 marks the second year of this three-year OSHA grant to provide training and technical assistance, develop educational materials, and mentor trainees. In summary, grant funding has been used to: 1) Coordinate the Latino Forum and the Action Summit on Worker Health and Safety; 2) Implement Needs Assessment activities with each of the targeted industries; 3) Convene quarterly Advisory Committee meetings; 4) Update/revise and adapt training materials; and 5) Provide 17 workshops to a total of 636 workers and community representatives.

School Action for Safety and Health (SASH)

Community Partners: UC Berkley Labor Occupational Health Program

California school districts face a number of occupational safety and health issues. In some cases, school districts have been fined by Cal/OSHA. Maintenance and operations departments and other school employees are working to address these problems in a climate of reduced funding. In June 2009, LOSH entered a partnership with the UC Berkeley Labor Occupational Health Program to carry out the School Action for Safety and Health (SASH) Training Program funded by the Commission on Health and Safety and Workers’ Compensation.

LOSH Special Projects Coordinator, Sarah Jacobs, heads the statewide program in Southern California to help school districts reduce the high rate of work-related injuries and illnesses among school employees. The SASH Program offers a free, one-day training program to help build the capacity of district-level health and safety coordinators to serve as resources to other employees and develop an Injury and Illness Prevention Program (IIPP) for school employees. The trainings are designed to increase participants’ skills in identifying hazards, understanding why injuries occur, knowing how hazards can be controlled, participating in prevention efforts, and involving other employees in safety.
Coalition to Support Warehouse Workers

Community Partners: Clergy and Laity United for Social Justice (CLUE), Warehouse Workers United

LOSH received a Susan Hardwood Training Grant from Federal OSHA to work with Warehouse Workers United (WWU) and Clergy and Laity United for Social Justice (CLUE) to develop a group of core worker leaders in the warehouse industry to train other workers and to document key health and safety issues affecting this particularly vulnerable group.

LOSH has partnered with WWU and CLUE in an effort to ensure basic health and safety rights for warehouse workers in the Inland Empire. Worker-leaders helped to develop a needs assessment and conducted over 100 worker interviews to determine some of the key hazards warehouse workers face, such as exposure to chemicals and air pollutants (including diesel exhaust), extreme temperatures, and unsafe machinery. They also documented the incidence of musculoskeletal disorders (such as strains, sprains, and back injuries) associated with heavy lifting and repetitive motion. Building on the assessment results, Warehouse Workers United and LOSH Associate Director of Education Deogracia Cornelio issued a report entitled “Shattered Dreams and Broken Bodies: A Brief Review of the Inland Empire Warehouse Industry”. The report was presented by the worker-leaders to the Warehouse Worker Community Accountability Commission, and the report was highlighted in the February 24, 2012 issue of the Cal/OSHA Reporter.

With the assistance of LOSH, WWU and CLUE staff, workers employed at a warehouse facility in Chino, CA filed a complaint in July, 2011 with the San Bernardino office of Cal/OSHA. The subsequent investigation resulted in over 40 serious citations at four worksites including: lack of compliance with basic Cal/OSHA regulations such as the Injury and Illness Prevention Program (IIPP); failure to protect workers from exposure to extreme temperatures and chemical dust; improper stacking of boxes; electrical hazards; and poorly maintained machinery, among others. The citations amounted to over $256,000 in fines. All citations were filed against both the warehouse company and the staffing agency that recruited workers for the facility, a first time dual-employment Cal/OSHA citation.
During summer 2011, LOSH played a critical role in an ambitious statewide Heat Illness Prevention Campaign (HIPC). The overall goal was to reduce and prevent heat-related fatalities and illness among low-wage, non-English speaking outdoor workers in California, with a focus on inland, desert, Central Valley and coastal agricultural regions. The third phase, which is currently underway, is a continuation and expansion of the Campaign’s 2011 efforts.

LOSH’s bilingual and bicultural staff conducted a number of outreach and education efforts designed to: 1) educate workers, employers and the community as a whole about needed prevention measures both during work and in their off hours; 2) develop a “community norm” that views heat illness as a serious issue that requires action in the workplace and community; and, 3) increase the visibility of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) as an agency responsive to workers’ needs.

In 2011, partnerships were established with roughly 70 different organizations that predominately reach Latino workers and employers in industries where heat exposure is a great concern. Five of these organizations worked with LOSH to host Spanish-language Training of Trainer courses in the Campaign’s target areas in Southern California (i.e. inland, desert and coastal agricultural regions). The goal of the TOT courses was for participants to utilize the heat prevention information and resources provided to them to educate community members, workers and employers in their communities.

Additional 2011 education efforts included:

• A two-hour introductory training for six EMPLEO Hotline call center staff and LA Mexican Consulate representatives at the EMPLEO office in San Bernardino. The EMPLEO hotline was launched in 2003 by the Department of Labor to address questions and complaints from Spanish-speaking workers. LOSH has provided support and technical assistance to the EMPLEO program for the past five years.

• A three-hour heat illness awareness session for sixteen school district employee leaders. This awareness session was in response to numerous concerns about heat exposure expressed during the School Action for Safety and Health (SASH) trainings.

In summer 2012, LOSH has thus far carried out 3 Spanish-language TOT courses in Southern California (San Diego, Coachella Valley and Ventura), reaching 86 community leaders from 28 different organizations. Two more TOTs are scheduled in the desert inland area of Ontario and in Los Angeles where many construction, day labor and landscaping groups are located and in need of heat-prevention education.
Research: Occupational Health & Safety

California Department of Public Health MOU: (Fatality Assessment and Control Evaluation) FACE Fact Sheet Translation and Dissemination

Community Partners: California Department of Public Health

FACE Fact Sheets – FACE is part of the Occupational Health Branch within the California Department of Public Health (CDPH) and is funded by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health to identify conditions that lead to fatal injuries at work and to recommend policies and practices to prevent them. LOSH collaborates with the CDPH to review, translate and disseminate FACE Fact sheets to Southern California workers in high risk jobs or occupations. During fiscal year 2011-2012 LOSH disseminated 9527 FACE sheets to Southern California workers in high risk jobs or occupations at health fairs, day laborer events, union events, worker trainings and at the Mexican, Guatemalan, and Salvadoran consulates.

Office Ergonomics

A journal article on office ergonomics is undergoing final revisions. “Musculoskeletal disorders among clerical workers in Los Angeles: A public health approach” analyzes data from 2,310 clerical workers for submission in July to the American Journal of Industrial Medicine.
Worker Occupational Safety and Health Training and Education Program (WOSHTEP)

Community Partners: California Department of Industrial Relations Commission on Health and Safety and Workers’ Compensation

WOSHTEP is a unique State-funded, worker education program built on the principle that worker education increases worker participation, which in turns is an effective way to advance workplace safety and health. The purpose of WOSHTEP is to reduce job-related injuries and illnesses among all California workers. WOSHTEP serves a variety of industries, and participants come from diverse occupations and work settings. Special emphasis is placed on reaching employers and workers in high risk industries. Focus is also on groups with special needs, such as workers and employers with limited English proficiency; those who have not had sufficient access to formal education and literacy, young workers, and other traditionally underserved industries or groups of workers.

Through WOSHTEP, UCLA-LOSH offers a 24-hour basic health and safety training course (WOSH Specialists) which is particularly useful for worker leaders and those participating in health and safety committees. We also offer shorter awareness sessions and yearly refreshers; educational resources for small business; young worker health and safety leadership programs; and resources to support workplace safety and health such as newsletters and technical assistance. All training is offered in Spanish and English; materials have been produced in English, Spanish, Mandarin and Korean.

WOSH Specialists & Trainers Networks - After participating in the 24-hour training, WOSH Specialists are encouraged to take a leadership role in promoting health and safety in their workplaces and communities and to become part of a network of workplace safety and health advocates and leaders in Southern California. They are mentored by LOSH staff and participate in Training-of-Trainers and refresher courses; receive technical assistance; have access to resources; and remain in ongoing communication through a listserv and a biannual newsletter.

Spanish language Training of Trainers (TOT) - In July 2011, a 32-hour TOT was provided to 21 Spanish-speaking workers and worker advocates at the LA County Federation of Labor. Since attending the TOT, all but one of the participants have either co-facilitated an awareness session on health and safety, participated in an educational skit on health and safety, and/or completed a presentation on a workplace health and safety topic.

Community Outreach & Education – During fiscal-year 2011 monthly presentations reached 1,447 workers who have little or no access to health information. LOSH has continued to partner with community based organizations to help build their capacity to address health and safety issues, and to develop targeted educational activities and materials.
Worker Occupational Safety and Health Training and Education Program (WOSHTEP)

Small Business Resources: Training materials have been developed for restaurants, janitorial services, and general industry small businesses, and 2-3 hour courses were held to assist small business owners and managers train their employees to participate in identifying and controlling workplace hazards.

The Construction Case Study Training Guide: LOSH co-developed this guide in collaboration with the Labor Occupational Health Program (LOHP) at the University of California Berkeley and the State Building and Construction Trades Council of California (SBCTC), AFL-CIO. This Guide includes 13 case studies on key hazards in the construction industry. Each case tells the story of a worker who was seriously injured or killed on the job. All of the facts related to the incident are presented with the aim of teaching how to prevent similar occurrences from happening in the future.

Indoor Heat Illness Prevention Module: LOSH developed materials to educate workers about indoor heat illness prevention. The 2-4 hour training session can be targeted to different workers and settings, and includes recognition of the symptoms of heat illness as well as its causes, emphasizing workplace conditions associated to indoor heat stress. The materials are designed to teach workers about the mechanisms the body uses to cool off and why such mechanisms can break down. They provide information about applicable health and safety regulations and help workers identify actions they and their employers can take to prevent heat illness in indoor work settings.

IRLE has a broad research network; in addition to initiating innovative in-house research, IRLE supports research and community initiatives across UCLA and other institutions through grants, research networks and collaborations.

IRLE Graduate Student Small Grants
In 2012, IRLE made available a small pool of funds for UCLA graduate student research grants. Grants were awarded to research proposals that contributed new and engaging research to the field of labor and employment:

Luis Alvarez-Leon (Geography)
The Information Grid: The Digital Foundations of the Cognitive-Cultural Economy

Molly Ball (History)
Inequality in the city of São Paulo, Brazil (1889-1930)

Hsin-Chieh Chang (Community Health Sciences)
Social Integration among Southeast Asian Women Migrants in Taiwan: Exploring the Linkages between Marriage, Work, Migration and Health

Bradley Cleveland (Urban Planning)
Workers in the Informal Economy and Disaster Risk Reduction: Engaging waste pickers and street vendors in the project of urban resilience

Mindy Chen (Social Welfare)
Toward an Effective Community-Labor Coalition: a Case Study of the CLEAN Carwash Campaign

Laura Enriquez (Sociology)
Undocumented Employment: Theorizing Patterns of Incorporation for Current and Formerly Undocumented Mexican-Origin Young Adults

Nathan Low/Curt Brown (Law)
Teacher Tenure

Tom Narins (Geography)
The domestic employment impacts of Chinese trade and investment in Bolivia and Chile

Peter Norlander (Anderson)
Human Resource policies and practices of the Information Technology services industry in India

Greg Pierce (Urban Planning)
Potential Impact of Social Businesses on Local Employment in Bangladesh

Stephanie Santos (Women’s Studies)
“Don’t monopolize the good”: Development Aggression and Subaltern Filipina Women

UC Small Grants
In addition to the funding available to UCLA graduate students, small grants of $5,000 each were awarded to UC Irvine, UC Riverside, UC Santa Barbara and UC San Diego to support graduate students engaged in labor and workplace issues.

Each campus distributed the funding as appropriate to their campus, either through small research grants, cash awards for papers or assistance on labor programming.
Supported Research

Faculty Research Grants
From 2007 – 2011, IRLE awarded Faculty Mini Grants to UCLA faculty engaged in research on labor and employment. Although funding challenges have discontinued this opportunity, the following results of the Faculty Mini Grants were compiled this year:

16 News Articles & Media Coverage
“Justice for Janitors Campaigners Record Their Stories”
Los Angeles Times, May 8, 2011 (Higbie, 2011)
“Unemployment: UCLA Study Shows Stigma of Joblessness is Immediate”
ABC News, April 6, 2011 (Shih, 2011)

32 Publications
(Lytle-Hernandez, 2008)

17 Scholarly talks & presentations
“Defending Day Labor in Los Angeles”
Loyola Law School, Labor and Employer Law Colloquium September 17, 2011. (Cummings, 2009)
“Union Matters: Low-Wage Workers, their Children, and School Reform,”

48 UCLA Faculty Mini Grants Awarded by IRLE between 2007 and 2011.
IRLE researchers are frequent contributors to the scholarly community and are often called to present their work in a range of forums outside UCLA. IRLE staff gave 65 scholarly lectures, talks and presentations during the 2011-2012 year. Highlights are listed below by staff member.

Visiting Researchers

Visiting Scholars and Graduate Students
IRLE Visiting Scholars and Graduate Students are invited to spend a month to year in residence at UCLA, working on research projects and meeting with UCLA students and faculty. Visiting scholars enhance the intellectual progress of IRLE research projects, as well as contribute to the Working Paper series and colloquia. Through our network of visiting scholars, IRLE’s research extends around the world. This map of our visiting scholars and visiting graduate researchers for 2011-2012, demonstrates just how global our research community is.

Research and Policy Briefs
The IRLE Research and Policy Brief series focuses on labor and employment issues in California. The following were published this year:

Project Labor Agreements in Los Angeles: the Example of the Los Angeles Unified School District
Uyen Le, California Construction Academy, UCLA Labor Center
Lauren Appelbaum, Institute for Research on Labor and Employment

California Crisis: The United States and California Two and a Half Years After the End of the Great Recession
Lauren Appelbaum, Institute for Research on Labor and Employment

IRLE Industry Reports
IRLE Academic Unit published its first industry report in 2011 on the Economic and Production Impacts of the 2009 California Film and Television Tax Credit. Sponsored by the non-partisan think tank The Headway Project, the report concluded that the California Film & Television Tax Credit Program does benefit the state in creating jobs, but the return on the subsidy may not be as great as previously calculated by the Los Angeles Economic Development Corporation.

The report was authored by Lauren Appelbaum and Chris Tilly from the Institute for Research on Labor and Employment and Juliet Huang, graduate of the UCLA Anderson School of Management.

“Even though there is likely a small benefit to the state, I think the California film and television tax credit is a worthy program because, without it, in the long run, California is likely to lose dominance in an industry that is very important to the state’s economy”
- Lauren Appelbaum
Research Publications

Industry Reports: California Construction Academy

The CCA routinely conducts research and publishes findings on construction industry issues and policies. These research reports were published in the 2011-12 year:

On Track for Quality Careers: Project Labor Agreements and the Los Angeles Metropolitan Transportation Authority
Daniel Villao and Uyen Le

Published at the 2012 National Transportation Workforce Summit, this paper discusses workforce policies and processes at the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) to implement Measure R. It evaluates MTA policies that aim to create good construction careers that are accessible to diverse communities.

Project Labor Agreements: Pathways to Business Ownership and Workforce Development in Los Angeles
Uyen Le

This study examines data from Los Angeles Unified School District’s Project Stabilization Agreement from 2003 to 2011. The report finds that 48% of construction project dollars went to small and disadvantaged businesses, far surpassing LAUSD’s goal to ensure that 25% of construction project dollars went to small business enterprises.

Project Labor Agreement & School Construction White Paper
California Construction Academy

This white paper reviews the study “Measuring the Cost of Project Labor Agreements on School Construction in California,” written by Vince Vasquez, Dr. Dale Glaser, and W. Erik Bruvold and funded by the Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC). The analysis raises concerns about the study’s focus, methodology, and the way in which results are reported. State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson cites this study in an open letter to county and district superintendents and charter school administrators.
State of the Unions
Lauren Appelbaum, Institute for Research on Labor and Employment
Ben Zipperer University of Massachusetts, Amherst

The 2011 report found that while unionization rates remained stable in Los Angeles, unionization fell in California and dropped to historic lows nationwide.

“The trend is bad for unions, it’s bad for workers and, because it’s a reflection of a jobless recovery, it’s bad for the country.”
- Chris Tilly
Working Papers
IRLE research affiliates, scholars, staff and faculty contribute to IRLE's working paper series, which has a total of 45 publications published between 2006-2012. The following working papers were submitted in 2011-2012:

Reconnecting to Work – Introduction
Lauren D Appelbaum, 2011

Land Use Rights, Market Transition, and Rural-urban Labor Migration in China (1980-84)
Yiu Por Chen, 2012

The Elasticity of Labor Supply to the Firm Over the Business Cycle
Briggs Depew and Todd Sorensen, 2012

Employment at Will versus Just Cause Dismissal: Applying the Due Process Model of Procedural Justice
Mark Harcourt, Helen Lam and Maureen Hannay, 2012

The Stigma of Unemployment: When joblessness leads to being jobless
Geoffrey Ho, Margaret Shih, Daniel J Walters, Todd Pittinsky, 2011

Job Quality and Institutional Dynamics of Competition in Postfordist Capitalism
Matt Vidal, 2011
New Books
From bad jobs to green jobs and from global movements to local movements, these new publications from the UCLA Labor Center highlight the diversity and strength of our research projects.

Undocumented and Unafraid: Tam Tran, Cinthya Felix and the Immigrant Youth Movement

Edited by Kent Wong, Janna Shadduck-Hernandez, Fabiola Inzunza, Julie Monroe, Victor Narro and Abel Valenzuela Jr.

No longer living in the shadows, undocumented students are coming out, organizing, advocating for change in immigration policy, and building a new civil rights movement. This book is a tribute to Tam Tran and Cinthya Felix, UCLA graduates and leaders in the undocumented student movement, and captures the voices of a new generation who are making history and changing our country.

Beyond Green Jobs: Building Lasting Opportunities in Energy Efficiency

By Daniel Villao, Uyen Le, Hugo Sarmiento and Stefanie Ritoper

Beyond Green Jobs describes how comprehensive, deep green energy efficiency can bring the best benefits to the environment and create good, long-term careers. It demystifies the construction industry, captures snapshots of innovative programs throughout the country, and provides a foundation to bring energy efficiency to scale.
IRLE staff frequently publish books, articles and other reports from their research. These two, well-received academic books were published in 2011-2012. For more staff publications, see page 74.

Just Neighbors?
Research on African American and Latino Relations in the United States
Edward Telles, Mark Sawyer, Gaspar Rivera-Salgado, EDITORS

Edited by: Edward Telles, Mark Sawyer and Gaspar Rivera Salgado

Just Neighbors? challenges the traditional black/white paradigm of American race relations by examining African Americans and Latinos as they relate to each other in the labor market, the public sphere, neighborhoods, and schools. The book shows the influence of race, class, and received stereotypes on black-Latino social interactions and offers insight on how finding common ground may benefit both groups. Just Neighbors? is published by the Russell Sage Foundation.

Are Bad Jobs Inevitable?
Trends, Determinants and Responses to Job Quality in the Twenty-First Century
Edited by: Chris Warhurst, Francoise Carre, Patricia Findlay and Chris Tilly

Job quality matters. It contributes to economic competitiveness, social cohesion and personal well-being. Focusing on “bad jobs”, the book outlines debates, developments, issues and trends in job quality whilst asking the question are bad jobs inevitable? The authors define and measure bad jobs; explain variation and change in job quality; and identify workplace practices and broader non-workplace strategies for making bad jobs better. The book is published by Palgrave Macmillan.
Improving the state of labor and employment can only be done by engaging in discussions on the economy, workers and policy. IRLE staff contribute to these discussions by publishing their research in academic journals and community outlets. IRLE staff published 27 articles, papers and reports in 2011-2012. Highlights are listed by unit below.

IRLE Academic Unit

Labor Center

HARRT

LOSH

For new books published by IRLE and additional staff publications, please see pages 72-73.
LOSH, HARRT and the Labor Center produce quarterly newsletters that are distributed to their academic and community constituencies. The LOSH Newsletter, Labor Education News and HARRT Quarterly include updates on programs and publications at IRLE as well as articles by staff and affiliated faculty.
Social IRLE

Labor and employment research teaches us the value of community and engaging with students, workers, researchers and governments. This section is a glimpse on how IRLE stays connected with our constituents.

IRLE’s research and community work is often recognized for its far-reaching influence on civic and academic communities. This list highlights some of the media attention IRLE received for projects in 2011-2012.
IRLE Staff in the Community

For many IRLE staff, community work is more than 9 to 5. Our staff are leaders on campus and off - many hold affiliations at community and academic groups.

Chris Tilly sits on the advisory boards for Grassroots International, Food Chain Workers Alliance and the Faculty No-Sweat Alliance.

Victor Narro sits on the Board of Commissioners of the Los Angeles Community Redevelopment Agency of the City of Los Angeles. He also sits on the board of the Wage Justice Center, Strategic Actions for a Just Economy (SAJE) and Building Skills Partnership.

Gaspar Rivera Salgado is the Los Angeles Coordinator the Frente Indigena de Organizationes Bunacionales and is on the advisory board of the Enlace Institute.

Janna Shadduck Hernández serves with the Los Angeles Unified School District as a member of the Parents as Equal Partners Taskforce.

Linda Delp serves on the Advisory Boards of the Southern California Education and Research Center based at UCLA and UC Irvine and WORKSAFE, a statewide policy advocacy organization. She is a member of the Advisory Committees of Cal/OSHA; the Los Angeles Alliance for a New Economy (LAANE); Don’t Waste LA Campaign; and the CLEAN Car Wash Campaign and on the Executive Committee of Southern California Coalition for Occupational Safety.

Samantha Quintero serves on the Advisory Board of Venice YouthBuild, a local community organization that moves at-risk youth into productive and self-sufficient futures through a comprehensive secondary education and job training program.

Tanya Akel and Fernando Tapia teach courses and workshops at the Labor Center at the Los Angeles Trade Technical College.

MEMORANDUM TO PROVOST DYKSTRA RE: INSTITUTE OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

On June 16, 1945 the Senate finally approved A.B. No. 391 as amended, which provides as follows:

"Out of money in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, there is hereby appropriated the sum of $100,000 to the Regents of the University of California, to be expended during the 97th and 98th fiscal years by the Regents of the University of California for the establishment of a School of Industrial Relations on the Los Angeles campus of the University. Shortly thereafter the wording of the proposal was changed to provide for establishment of "Schools of Industrial Relations at the
